Business Holding Its Own, Employment Gaining

A. F. OF L. SURVEY MADE PUBLIC FOR FIRST QUARTER, 1931

MONTHS PASSED HAVE BEEN CHARACTERIZED BY UNEVEN TRENDS

MORE DEFINITE CLIMB TOWARDS PROSPERITY IN FALL SEASON

Washington, April 4.—(U.P.) — Belief that business is holding its own and employment is gaining is expressed in an American Federation of Labor survey for the first quarter of 1931 made public.

"The first quarter ends with a firmer conviction that business has reached the bottom of depression," the survey says, but adds the additional activity of industry and trade "has not been more than seasonal."

"As yet there is no conclusive evidence sustained recovery has begun. The months just passed have been characterized by uneven trends, some industries moving upward, some still downward. Such a period usually comes at the end of a business depression, immediately before revival.

"Competent business forecasters seem to agree," the survey continues, "that the business decline is probably at an end and that a return to last fall's conditions is unlikely. In the fall we may look forward to a more definite climb upward toward prosperity."

Employment gains reported by the federation survey were "slight" in March but a graph representing the first quarter showed improvement from January to March to have been "considerably greater this year than last."

Key factors to which business looks for indications of fundamental changes were not particularly favorable except in building and home construction for which contracts in the first three weeks of March increased 40 per cent compared with 25 per cent, which would be the normal seasonal increase.

Demand for automobiles, the federation continued, has not reached expected proportions because of "low incomes, particularly among workers." Steel mill operations which increased in January and February "were checked in the third week of March" because of sub-normal demands from the automobile and railroad industries."

But the survey report concludes "business sentiment is continually improving."

"The situation this spring is very different from last," the survey continues. "For this year more of the fundamental adjustments have been made and business men have their feet more firmly on the ground."

Discussing current agitation for wage cuts, the federation survey says most advocates are connected with banking but that at least one leading manufacturer formerly opposed to reductions now publicly announces an intention to cut wages.

AUTOMOBILE HALTS ESCAPING PRISONER

Detroit, April 4.—(U.P.)—After jumping through a second floor hotel window and making a dash for freedom through a barrage of bullets fired by police, Sidney Nathanson, 36, was halted only when knocked down by an automobile. He was held for Chicago police who said he was wanted on four counts of having violated the Illinois election laws and contempt of court.

Dr. Albert A. Michelson 'Resting Easily' at Home

Pasadena, Calif., April 4.—(U.P.)—Dr. Albert A. Michelson, noted scientist, was "resting easily" at his home today and was reported improving after a nervous breakdown which for a time left him in a critical condition. A physician and private nurse are attending him.

Coast Guard Patrol Boat Rams British Schooner

New York, April 4.—(U.P.)—Coast guards received word today that the coast guard patrol boat Legare rammed the British auxiliary schooner Symor today off Nantucket.

The report said the Symor sank after its crew of nine had been taken aboard the Legare, which proceeded to New London.

Lyle W. Hines Named to Board of Accountancy

St. Paul, April 4.—(U.P.)—Lyle W. Hines, St. Paul accountant, was today named by Gov. Floyd B. Olson as a member of the state board of accountancy to succeed Herbert M. Temple, also of St. Paul.

Mr. Hines' appointment was for a three year term expiring January, 1934.

PRISONER BENDS 6 BARS WITH HIS ARMS AND ESCAPES

St. Paul, April 4.—(U.P.)—A prisoner in solitary confinement bent six bars with his arms today and escaped from a cell in the Ramsey county courthouse.

Roy Evans, alias Williams, was being held on highway robbery charges. To prevent him from talking with two companions who were arrested with him, police last night placed him in a single little-used cell.

At 10 a. m. today police went to bring Evans to court for arraignment and found he had bent the bars of his cell to form an opening about a foot by a foot and a half and had crawled out into an alleyway and fled.

The other two men captured with Evans were John Giber and Floyd B. Jones, both of St. Paul.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE FOREIGN MARKETS SOUGHT

AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN TAKING RENEWED INTEREST IN THIS PHASE

DUE TO REDUCTION OF HOME MARKETS BY BUSINESS DEPRESSION

By THOMAS L. STOKES

Washington, April 4. — American business men, both large and small, are taking a renewed interest in the development of foreign markets due to reduction of the home market by the business depression, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Julius Klein said today.

This revived interest, Klein said, is manifest in an average of 15,000 inquiries a day during the last week as to foreign markets and foreign business conditions, an almost unbelievable flood of mail. Ten years ago, he said, inquiries averaged only 700 a day.

"Five times in the last three months," he added, "the daily average of the number of inquiries has smashed previous records."

"There is no question but what the American business man is looking for new foreign markets," he said. "When eggs fall out of one basket you've got to scuttle around and get a new basket. Those looking for new markets include many small business men."

Klein has seen these waves come and go in his 15 years of watching trade trends in the commerce department, and discussed the movement philosophically.

Many of the small business men now looking for new foreign outlets for their goods, he explained, will desert the foreign field when business revives at home. This has happened before after depressions have run their length.

"In 1909 many business men dropped the trade they had built up in South America when business returned to normal again in this country and it took a European war for the United States to recapture that field," he said.

The whole energy of the commerce department, he explained, is directed to gaining and obtaining foreign business on a permanent basis.

The present depression is world-wide and all countries are affected, so that the scramble for foreign markets is highly competitive. Many American business men with vision are planning their programs on a long-time basis, realizing that they must always have a foreign outlet for some of their products.

Some of the inquiries which come to the department are due to foreign investments. Investors want to know about the stability of conditions in countries where they have invested their money. The United States now has around $15,000,000,000 in foreign investments.

One of the most productive fields of business for the United States now is Russia. This country has forged to the front again in sales to Russia, which totaled $150,000,000 during the 1929-1930 fiscal year, with Germany second and Great Britain third, commerce department records show.

DOG, PARROT, CASH MERCHANDISE, ALL HAD DISAPPEARED

Chicago, April 4.—(U.P.)—Samuel Alexander was confident his drug store never would be robbed.

"If robbers come, my bulldog will chase 'em away," he said.

"And if the bulldog doesn't chase 'em, then my parrot will remember what they say and the police will catch 'em," he added to make his confidence more impressive.

When Alexander was called to his store early today he discovered it had been robbed. Besides $1,500 worth of merchandise, $375 in cash was gone. The dog and parrot also had disappeared.

SOLEMN SERVICE WITHOUT MASS FOR ROCKNE

HELD IN CHURCH OF THE SACRED HEART ON THE NOTRE DAME CAMPUS

WORLD LISTENED TO A BRIEF CEREMONY OVER RADIO THIS AFTERNOON

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

South Bend, Ind., April 4.—Beneath the spreading boughs of Old Council Oak on the edge of town a shady spot today awaited the body of Knute Rockne.

Beginning at 3 P. M. the last rites—a simple, solemn service without mass—for Rockne will be held in the Church of the Sacred Heart on the campus.

Places in the little church shaped like a cross have been reserved for Notre Dame athletes, intimate friends of Rockne and the immediate family. The world may listen to the ceremony over the radio.

Millions who marvelled at the great football machines built by Rockne will tune in. Efforts were being made to have the broadcast transmitted over a short wave length to Norway, birthplace of the late coach.

From far and near the crowds came to pay their last respects. Brave men who fought for Rockne and Notre Dame could not control their grief. Hundreds who never knew him but who saw his long line of gridiron heroes in action—Gipp, Barry, Walsh, Flannigan, Stuhldreher, Crowley, Mohardt, Mehre, Wynne, Schwartz, Carideo and others—mourned his passing.

All business houses closed their doors for the day. Flags were at half-mast. The Notre Dame stadium was draped in black.

Active pall-bearers were six members of the 1930 national championship football team — Frank Carideo, Marchmont Schwartz, Lawrence Mullins, Martin Brill, Capt. Tom Conley and Captain-elect Tom Yarr.

Twelve members of Rockne's graduating class of 1914 formed the guard of honor. The list of honorary pall bearers contained the names of 130 men from all parts of the nation, from all walks of life.

Cottonwood Falls, Kan., April 4.—All propellor blades of the airplane which crashed near here, killing eight men, were accounted for today, Sheriff Arthur Deering said.

The department of commerce included in its report the possibility of a broken propellor causing the accident.

Deering said the ninth and only missing blade was recovered from the wreckage. A souvenir hunter took it from a truck carrying it to Wichita, and it was recovered yesterday, the sheriff said.

BANDITS ROB ST. PAUL CAFE OF $1,000 CASH

USE VACANT STORE NEXT DOOR TO KOGL & RAPP RESTAURANT AS HEADQUARTERS

ROBBERS IN MINNEAPOLIS ARE BLAMED FOR A $1,500 FIRE IN GROCERY

St. Paul, Minn., April 4.—(U.P.)—Using a vacant store next door as headquarters, bandits broke through a tile wall, smashed a safe and escaped with $1,000 from the Kogl & Rapp restaurant.

Fred Roller, waiter, discovered the looting when he appeared for work this morning and saw the hole. The dial had been hammered off the safe and a hurried checkup by Kogl revealed that more than $1,000 had been taken by the burglars.

The bandits after opening the safe had apparently fled in haste, police said, for two $10 bills were found on the floor near the hole in the wall.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 4.—Robbers who sought to cover up their theft were blamed for a $1,500 fire in a local grocery store. The loot was small, it was reported.

O'Grady-McDermott Bill is Constitutional

Springfield, Ill., April 4.—(U.P.)—The O'Grady-McDermott bill to repeal all Illinois prohibition bills was declared constitutional today by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom in an advisory opinion requested by Governor L. L. Emmerson.

The bill was passed recently and now is awaiting action by the governor who has until April 14 to sign or veto it.

GUILTY IN LINGLE SLAYING!

The verdict returned by the jury after 27 hours deliberation found Leo Brothers guilty of murdering Alfred ("Jake") Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter. His punishment is 14 years imprisonment, the lightest penalty possible under the verdict.

By WILLIAM E. HALLBERG

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, April 4.—Conviction of Leo V. Brothers on a charge of murdering Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter, was regarded by civic leaders as the greatest step ever taken to "end gang rule in Chicago."

A jury which deliberated for 27 hours found Brothers guilty last night of shooting the reporter in the back of the head in a pedestrian subway last June 9. His punishment was fixed at 14 years' imprisonment, the lightest penalty possible under the verdict.

"By convicting this killer the jury served notice on the world that gang killers are not wholly immune in our city," said Rufus C. Dawes, president of the World's Fair, or Century of Progress Exposition, to be held in 1933.

"I regret the penalty was so light, but the conviction alone will have a wholesome, corrective effect upon the present crime tendencies and will make hired killers more reluctant to murder than they have been," said Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Association of Commerce.

The sentence admittedly was a compromise, made to "swing over" the one juror who held out for hours against eleven companions who early decided that Brothers should be found guilty.

Reports after the jury disbanded were that the first vote had been 7 to 5 for acquittal. In all, 24 ballots were taken. All but one of the jurors favored the guilty verdict before the tenth vote was taken. The one man refused to yield until the final vote.

Brothers accepted the verdict without any show of emotion. His mother, Mrs. Rose Jessen of Webster Grove, Mo., stepped outside the court room just before the verdict was read.

Mrs. Betty Cook, Brothers' sweetheart, sobbed audibly when the verdict was pronounced. She ran from the room a few minutes later and unintentionally locked herself in a witness room, where she was an involuntary prisoner for 30 minutes.

Marched from his cell when word was sent that a decision had been reached, Brothers stood with Defense Attorney Louis Piquett near the witness chair while the verdict was read.

He stood for a minute, silently rubbing his chin after the word "guilty" echoed through the crowded court room.

"Let's duck," he whispered to a bailiff when he could stand the silence, broken only by his sweetheart's sobs, no longer.

"I want to be alone," he told photographers later when they tried to take pictures of him in his cell.

Attorney Piquette, also Young, asked immediately for a new trial. A hearing on his request was set for April 24.

THIS WEEK IN THE LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, April 4.—(U.P.)—Passage by the house of the bill proposing a $15,400,000 bond issue for highway construction and maintenance in 1931 and 1932 was the outstanding event this week in Minnesota's legislature.

Here is the day by day record:

Monday—Senate killed bill requiring additional safety measures for railroads and passed bill strengthening state laws regarding tubeculosis tests for cattle.

Tuesday—House passed highway bond issue bill. Senate passed statewide boxing bill, confirmed appointment of R. A. Trovatten as agricultural commissioner and passed bill repealing so-called Baumes law.

Wednesday—Senate passed bill under which Minnesota would comply with changes made in national enfocement act. Reapportionment committee of senate approved plans for redistricting for submission to senate. House passed general education appropriations bill.

Thursday—Bill for division of St. Louis county killed by senate. Measure proposing payment of $100 bonus to parents of babies born in Minnesota introduced in senate. House considered motor truck regulation and conservation bills but took no action.

Friday—Both houses adjourned until Monday.

Tokio, April 4.—(U.P.)—Premier Hamaguchi, who was wounded critically several months ago during an attempt to assassinate him, entered a hospital this afternoon for an operation.

ACTING ON "HOT TIP" MILL CITY POLICE ARREST 4

PEEK THROUGH HOTEL ROOM KEYHOLE, FIND THEY ARE HEAVILY ARMED

LATER QUARTET IDENTIFIED AS PROHIBITION AGENTS AND ARE RELEASED

Minneapolis, Minn., April 4.—(U.P.)—Acting on a "hot" tip, Minneapolis police last night set out to arrest a quartet from Chicago.

After trailing the four men for some time, police went up to their room. One officer peeked through a keyhole. All four of the men were armed and their revolvers strapped to their hips, he reported.

Yes, thought the police, these were Chicago gangsters come to prospect in the Twin Cities. With the ruse that the maid wanted to clean up their room, police entered and ordered the four to reach for the sky.

The four were disarmed and much puzzled, they protested, because "we're prohibition agents."

The police replied, "we've heard that one before."

The quartet were loaded off to jail but at the persistence of one of the prisoners, local prohibition headquarters were called. The reply was, "yes, they are four prohibition agents." Thereupon police apologized, released the agents and returned their guns.

IDEAL SOLUTION TO HAVE AUTHORS WRITE DIRECT FOR SCREEN

New York, April 4.—(U.P.)—What the motion picture industry needs is authors to write direct for the screen and what the author needs is a sound and inclusive contract "so one can talk of injunctions and things like that," in the opinion of John Galsworthy, English novelist and playwright.

"This thing of putting an author's name to a work when little, or nothing of his work has been left in a production is wholly unfair," he declared. "The ideal solution would be to get authors to write direct for the screen, the dialogue and action meant for the screen. The difficulty there, of course, is in finding writers sufficiently familiar with the new technique."

There is nothing left for him in the talking films, Galsworthy believes, but to see that he is well protected in his contracts.

FUNERAL PYRE PREPARED IN MANAGUA RUINS

OIL POURED OVER THE DEBRIS WHICH WAS ONCE CENTRAL MARKET AND PRISON

TOTAL DEAD NOT EXPECTED TO EXCEED 1,000, OVER HALF HAVE BEEN BURIED

By LEIGH STEVENSON

(Copyright, 1931, by the United Press)

Managua, Nicaragua, April 4. — A funeral pyre was prepared today in the ruins of the once-flourishing city of Managua.

Squads of relief workers, almost exhausted by the vain task of recovering all of the earthquake dead from the ruins of the central part of the city, poured oil over the debris which was once the central market and the penitentiary.

The wreckage will be the pyre of the uncovered dead today when the cremation will remove the last possibility of an exact count of casualties.

A careful check by national guard officials of the number buried since the city was destroyed by quakes last Tuesday showed a total of 566 bodies accounted for. In addition 40 others were reported buried in a trench at the outskirts of the city.

Lieut. Col. F. B. Garrett of Monroe, La., said that more than half of the dead were already buried and that the total would not exceed 1,000. E. J. Swift, the Red Cross director, confirmed his estimate.

The strain on the refugees as well as the marine forces and the national guards was demonstrated last night by seven shootings. A guard at the water tanks which formerly supplied the city, shot four persons attempting to take polluted water. The natives had been warned repeatedly against using the water, but the shortage forced them to extremes—with the resultant danger of an epidemic.

Earlier, another guard shot three looters who were fleeing from the ruins of the city. One of them had $7,000 on his person.

Evacuation of the last American women and children was resumed. The transport Chaumont at Corinto, where they were taken, will carry about 150 of them to the Canal Zone. The others will be taken to the United States by other ships.

Only about 15,000 refugees from the city are left in this vicinity and they are being cared for by the relief committee which Swift organized after conferences with American Minister Matthew Hanna and President Jose M. Moncada.

SEVERAL THOUSAND SCOTSMEN GAVE AWAY MONEY FOR YEARS

London, April 4.—(U.P.)—Several thousand Scotsmen have been giving money away for years. But they didn't know it.

Many tearful scenes are reported to have occurred when the thrifty hundreds read a newspaper report that they had been paying 32 cents for 26 cents worth of whiskey, and Scotch whiskey at that.

The difficulty arises, according to reports, from violations of the weights and measures act of 1889 which set the imperial measure standard. An average half-gill of whiskey in Glasgow costs 32 cents. A "glass" costs the same but actually contains only 26 cents worth of spirits.

The seller is within the law if the buyer calls for a "glass of whiskey" and gets it. The difference was that the Scotsmen didn't know this. They do now. It is reported the word "glass" may be dropped from their vocabulary.

MANY DEATHS ON KUCHINAGARABE ISLAND, JAPAN

HOUSES DAMAGED, MANY INJURED IN WESTERN ARGENTINA

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK FELT IN WESTERN SECTION, SAN FRANCISCO

Tokio, April 4.—(U.P.)—The eruption of a volcano on Kuchinagarabe Island in the Kagoshima Prefecture today caused many casualties and endangered thousands of inhabitants.

Tuguman, Argentina, April 4. — Many houses were damaged and numerous persons injured by sharp earthquake shocks in western Argentina yesterday. The quakes were felt in the provinces of Salta, Santiago Del Estero, Jujuy and Catamarca.

The quakes, which were resumed later in the day, lasted from 20 seconds to a minute.

La Union, Chile, April 4.—An earthquake shook this region last night but there was no loss of life.

Mexico City, April 4.—Pinotepa, in the state of Oakaca, was shaken by sharp earthquakes which caused panic among crowds attending religious services, the correspondent of Grafico reported. There were no serious damages.

San Francisco, April 4.—An earthquake shock was felt in the western section of San Francisco shortly after 10 o'clock last night. The shock was confined to the Mission and Golden Gate Park districts, and police reported there was no damage. Officials of Santa Clara University reported their seismograph did not record a quake.

2 LA CROSSE GIRLS BENT ON RUNNING AWAY FROM HOME

St. Paul, April 4.—(U.P.)—Dorothy Vanderbilt and Evelyn Baker, both 16, of La Crosse, Wis., were being sought today by police for their relatives in Wisconsin.

The girls had run away from their homes to visit the Baker girl's uncle in Minneapolis, police were told. Finally they were convinced to return home with a friend of the Baker family.

As the friend's car in which they were riding stopped for a traffic signal here, the girls leaped from the back seat of the car and disappeared. They are without funds, police were told.

TRAPPED BY FLAMES, RESCUES WIFE AND HIS 2 DAUGHTERS

Minneapolis, April 4.—(U.P.)—Trapped by flames that broke out in their home today, Lief E. Holm succeeded in rescuing his wife and two baby daughters.

He and his oldest daughter, Arlene, 4, suffered severe burns and cuts. They were taken to General hospital.

Holm first carried out his wife, who had fainted, and his youngest daughter, Eleanor, 3.

By the time he returned for Arlene the flames had gained headway and he was forced to jump through the window with the girl in his arms to make the escape.

PITTSBURGH'S 700 UNION TAXICAB DRIVERS MAY STRIKE

Pittsburgh, April 4.—(U.P.)—Pittsburgh's 700 union taxicab drivers will go on strike next week unless 40 dismissed drivers are reinstated, according to the ultimatum issued to the taxicab company today after the drivers voted 523 to 135 for a strike.

Federal and state labor conciliators were to confer with union leaders in the meantime in an effort to prevent a recurrence of the strike of last year in which one person was killed and more than 100 injured in accompanying disorders.

Rather Go to Jail Than Stand Nagging of Spouse

Atlantic City, N. J., April 4.—(U.P.)—"I'd rather go to jail than stand my wife's nagging," Robert C. Small, 36, told Judge Smathers today when brought in on a charge of non-support.

"Two months on the county road gang," decreed the court.

"Thank you," said Small politely.

"I wish it were for life," said Mrs. Small, who will receive 50 cents a day from her husband's labor but who must support five children.

St. Paul, Minn., April 4.—(U.P.)—More than 100 applications for pardons for inmates at Stillwater prison and St. Cloud reformatory will be considered by the state pardon board on May 5 and 5, it was announced today.

BANDITS ROB ST. PAUL CAFE OF $1,000 CASH

USE VACANT STORE NEXT DOOR TO KOGL & RAPP RESTAURANT AS HEADQUARTERS

ROBBERS IN MINNEAPOLIS ARE BLAMED FOR A $1,500 FIRE IN GROCERY

St. Paul, Minn., April 4.—(U.P.)—Using a vacant store next door as headquarters, bandits broke through a tile wall, smashed a safe and escaped with $1,000 from the Kogl & Rapp restaurant.

Fred Roller, waiter, discovered the looting when he appeared for work this morning and saw the hole. The dial had been hammered off the safe and a hurried checkup by Kogl revealed that more than $1,000 had been taken by the burglars.

The bandits after opening the safe had apparently fled in haste, police said, for two $10 bills were found on the floor near the hole in the wall.

Minneapolis, Minn., April 4.—Robbers who sought to cover up their theft were blamed for a $1,500 fire in a local grocery store. The loot was small, it was reported.

O'Grady-McDermott Bill is Constitutional

Springfield, Ill., April 4.—(U.P.)—The O'Grady-McDermott bill to repeal all Illinois prohibition bills was declared constitutional today by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom in an advisory opinion requested by Governor L. L. Emmerson.

The bill was passed recently and now is awaiting action by the governor who has until April 14 to sign or veto it.

GUILTY IN LINGLE SLAYING!

Leo V. Brothers; his mother (center), Mrs. Rose Jessen; his sister (right), Mrs. Esther Dick, and his father, Harvey V. Brothers (inset), as they appeared awaiting the verdict of the jury. The verdict returned by the jury after 27 hours deliberation found Leo Brothers guilty of murdering Alfred ("Jake") Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter. His punishment is 14 years imprisonment, the lightest penalty possible under the verdict.

By WILLIAM E. HALLBERG
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, April 4.—Conviction of Leo V. Brothers on a charge of murdering Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter, was regarded by civic leaders as the greatest step ever taken to "end gang rule in Chicago."

A jury which deliberated for 27 hours found Brothers guilty last night of shooting the reporter in the back of the head in a pedestrian subway last June 9. His punishment was fixed at 14 years' imprisonment, the lightest penalty possible under the verdict.

"By convicting this killer the jury served notice on the world that gang killers are not wholly immune in our city," said Rufus C. Dawes, president of the World's Fair, or Century of Progress Exposition, to be held in 1933.

"I regret the penalty was so light, but the conviction alone will have a wholesome, corrective effect upon the present crime tendencies and will make hired killers more reluctant to murder than they have been," said Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Association of Commerce.

The sentence admittedly was a compromise, made to "swing over" the one juror who held out for hours against eleven companions who early decided that Brothers should be found guilty.

Reports after the jury disbanded were that the first vote had been 7 to 5 for acquittal. In all, 24 ballots were taken. All but one of the jurors favored the guilty verdict before the tenth vote was taken. The one man refused to yield until the final vote.

Brothers accepted the verdict without any show of emotion. His mother, Mrs. Rose Jessen of Webster Grove, Mo., stepped outside the court room just before the verdict was read.

Mrs. Betty Cook, Brothers' sweetheart, sobbed audibly when the verdict was pronounced. She ran from the room a few minutes later and unintentionally locked herself in a witness room, where she was an involuntary prisoner for 30 minutes.

Marched from his cell when word was sent that a decision had been reached, Brothers stood with Defense Attorney Louis Piquett near the witness chair while the verdict was read.

He stood for a minute, silently rubbing his chin after the word "guilty" echoed through the crowded court room.

"Let's duck," he whispered to a bailiff when he could stand the silence, broken only by his sweetheart's sobs, no longer.

"I want to be alone," he told photographers later when they tried to take pictures of him in his cell.

Attorney Piquette, also Young, asked immediately for a new trial. A hearing on his request was set for April 24.

THIS WEEK IN THE LEGISLATURE

St. Paul, April 4.—(U.P.)—Passage by the house of the bill proposing a $15,400,000 bond issue for highway construction and maintenance in 1931 and 1932 was the outstanding event this week in Minnesota's legislature.

Here is the day by day record:

Monday—Senate killed bill requiring additional safety measures for railroads and passed bill strengthening state laws regarding tubeculosis tests for cattle.

Tuesday—House passed highway bond issue bill. Senate passed statewide boxing bill, confirmed appointment of R. A. Trovatten as agricultural commissioner and passed bill repealing so-called Baumes law.

Wednesday—Senate passed bill under which Minnesota would comply with changes made in national enfocement act. Reapportionment committee of senate approved plans for redistricting for submission to senate. House passed general education appropriations bill.

Thursday—Bill for division of St. Louis county killed by senate. Measure proposing payment of $100 bonus to parents of babies born in Minnesota introduced in senate. House considered motor truck regulation and conservation bills but took no action.

Friday—Both houses adjourned until Monday.

Tokio, April 4.—(U.P.)—Premier Hamaguchi, who was wounded critically several months ago during an attempt to assassinate him, entered a hospital this afternoon for an operation.

ACTING ON "HOT TIP" MILL CITY POLICE ARREST 4

PEEK THROUGH HOTEL ROOM KEYHOLE, FIND THEY ARE HEAVILY ARMED

LATER QUARTET IDENTIFIED AS PROHIBITION AGENTS AND ARE RELEASED

Minneapolis, Minn., April 4.—(U.P.)—Acting on a "hot" tip, Minneapolis police last night set out to arrest a quartet from Chicago.

After trailing the four men for some time, police went up to their room. One officer peeked through a keyhole. All four of the men were armed and their revolvers strapped to their hips, he reported.

Yes, thought the police, these were Chicago gangsters come to prospect in the Twin Cities. With the ruse that the maid wanted to clean up their room, police entered and ordered the four to reach for the sky.

The four were disarmed and much puzzled, they protested, because "we're prohibition agents."

The police replied, "we've heard that one before."

The quartet were loaded off to jail but at the persistence of one of the prisoners, local prohibition headquarters were called. The reply was, "yes, they are four prohibition agents." Thereupon police apologized, released the agents and returned their guns.

IDEAL SOLUTION TO HAVE AUTHORS WRITE DIRECT FOR SCREEN

New York, April 4.—(U.P.)—What the motion picture industry needs is authors to write direct for the screen and what the author needs is a sound and inclusive contract "so one can talk of injunctions and things like that," in the opinion of John Galsworthy, English novelist and playwright.

"This thing of putting an author's name to a work when little, or nothing of his work has been left in a production is wholly unfair," he declared. "The ideal solution would be to get authors to write direct for the screen, the dialogue and action meant for the screen. The difficulty there, of course, is in finding writers sufficiently familiar with the new technique."

There is nothing left for him in the talking films, Galsworthy believes, but to see that he is well protected in his contracts.

FUNERAL PYRE PREPARED IN MANAGUA RUINS

OIL POURED OVER THE DEBRIS WHICH WAS ONCE CENTRAL MARKET AND PRISON

TOTAL DEAD NOT EXPECTED TO EXCEED 1,000, OVER HALF HAVE BEEN BURIED

By LEIGH STEVENSON
(Copyright, 1931, by the United Press)

Managua, Nicaragua, April 4. — A funeral pyre was prepared today in the ruins of the once-flourishing city of Managua.

Squads of relief workers, almost exhausted by the vain task of recovering all of the earthquake dead from the ruins of the central part of the city, poured oil over the debris which was once the central market and the penitentiary.

The wreckage will be the pyre of the uncovered dead today when the cremation will remove the last possibility of an exact count of casualties.

A careful check by national guard officials of the number buried since the city was destroyed by quakes last Tuesday showed a total of 566 bodies accounted for. In addition 40 others were reported buried in a trench at the outskirts of the city.

Lieut. Col. F. B. Garrett of Monroe, La., said that more than half of the dead were already buried and that the total would not exceed 1,000. E. J. Swift, the Red Cross director, confirmed his estimate.

The strain on the refugees as well as the marine forces and the national guards was demonstrated last night by seven shootings. A guard at the water tanks which formerly supplied the city, shot four persons attempting to take polluted water. The natives had been warned repeatedly against using the water, but the shortage forced them to extremes—with the resultant danger of an epidemic.

Earlier, another guard shot three looters who were fleeing from the ruins of the city. One of them had $7,000 on his person.

Evacuation of the last American women and children was resumed. The transport Chaumont at Corinto, where they were taken, will carry about 150 of them to the Canal Zone. The others will be taken to the United States by other ships.

Only about 15,000 refugees from the city are left in this vicinity and they are being cared for by the relief committee which Swift organized after conferences with American Minister Matthew Hanna and President Jose M. Moncada.

SEVERAL THOUSAND SCOTSMEN GAVE AWAY MONEY FOR YEARS

London, April 4.—(U.P.)—Several thousand Scotsmen have been giving money away for years. But they didn't know it.

Many tearful scenes are reported to have occurred when the thrifty hundreds read a newspaper report that they had been paying 32 cents for 26 cents worth of whiskey, and Scotch whiskey at that.

The difficulty arises, according to reports, from violations of the weights and measures act of 1889 which set the imperial measure standard. An average half-gill of whiskey in Glasgow costs 32 cents. A "glass" costs the same but actually contains only 26 cents worth of spirits.

The seller is within the law if the buyer calls for a "glass of whiskey" and gets it. The difference was that the Scotsmen didn't know this. They do now. It is reported the word "glass" may be dropped from their vocabulary.

MANY DEATHS ON KUCHINAGARABE ISLAND, JAPAN

HOUSES DAMAGED, MANY INJURED IN WESTERN ARGENTINA

EARTHQUAKE SHOCK FELT IN WESTERN SECTION, SAN FRANCISCO

Tokio, April 4.—(U.P.)—The eruption of a volcano on Kuchinagarabe Island in the Kagoshima Prefecture today caused many casualties and endangered thousands of inhabitants.

Tuguman, Argentina, April 4. — Many houses were damaged and numerous persons injured by sharp earthquake shocks in western Argentina yesterday. The quakes were felt in the provinces of Salta, Santiago Del Estero, Jujuy and Catamarca.

The quakes, which were resumed later in the day, lasted from 20 seconds to a minute.

La Union, Chile, April 4.—An earthquake shook this region last night but there was no loss of life.

Mexico City, April 4.—Pinotepa, in the state of Oakaca, was shaken by sharp earthquakes which caused panic among crowds attending religious services, the correspondent of Grafico reported. There were no serious damages.

San Francisco, April 4.—An earthquake shock was felt in the western section of San Francisco shortly after 10 o'clock last night. The shock was confined to the Mission and Golden Gate Park districts, and police reported there was no damage. Officials of Santa Clara University reported their seismograph did not record a quake.

2 LA CROSSE GIRLS BENT ON RUNNING AWAY FROM HOME

St. Paul, April 4.—(U.P.)—Dorothy Vanderbilt and Evelyn Baker, both 16, of La Crosse, Wis., were being sought today by police for their relatives in Wisconsin.

The girls had run away from their homes to visit the Baker girl's uncle in Minneapolis, police were told. Finally they were convinced to return home with a friend of the Baker family.

As the friend's car in which they were riding stopped for a traffic signal here, the girls leaped from the back seat of the car and disappeared. They are without funds, police were told.

TRAPPED BY FLAMES, RESCUES WIFE AND HIS 2 DAUGHTERS

Minneapolis, April 4.—(U.P.)—Trapped by flames that broke out in their home today, Lief E. Holm succeeded in rescuing his wife and two baby daughters.

He and his oldest daughter, Arlene, 4, suffered severe burns and cuts. They were taken to General hospital.

Holm first carried out his wife, who had fainted, and his youngest daughter, Eleanor, 3.

By the time he returned for Arlene the flames had gained headway and he was forced to jump through the window with the girl in his arms to make the escape.

PITTSBURGH'S 700 UNION TAXICAB DRIVERS MAY STRIKE

Pittsburgh, April 4. — (U.P.) — Pittsburgh's 700 union taxicab drivers will go on strike next week unless 40 dismissed drivers are reinstated, according to the ultimatum issued to the taxicab company today after the drivers voted 523 to 135 for a strike.

Federal and state labor conciliators were to confer with union leaders in the meantime in an effort to prevent a recurrence of the strike of last year in which one person was killed and more than 100 injured in accompanying disorders.

Rather Go to Jail Than Stand Nagging of Spouse

Atlantic City, N. J., April 4.—(U.P.)—"I'd rather go to jail than stand my wife's nagging," Robert C. Small, 36, told Judge Smathers today when brought in on a charge of non-support.

"Two months on the county road gang," decreed the court.

"Thank you," said Small politely.

"I wish it were for life," said Mrs. Small, who will receive 50 cents a day from her husband's labor but who must support five children.

St. Paul, Minn., April 4.—(U.P.)—More than 100 applications for pardons for inmates at Stillwater prison and St. Cloud reformatory will be considered by the state pardon board on May 5 and 5, it was announced today.

We Have Made a Difficult Task Easier

THE necessity of selecting a casket comes at a time when the mind is neither able nor willing to judge values and prices.

By supplying caskets of known quality and value, we have lightened the burden of decision and removed the elements of doubt.

It Was No Pat on the Back

WHEN two distinguished literary lights came in collision in New York recently, Dreiser gave Lewis no pat on the back but a slap in the face.

The Commonweal comments that perhaps we should be ashamed to confess it, but we cannot emulate the pained surprise with which most of our editorial colleagues refer to the recent fracas of the two at the Metropolitan club in New York. Their utterances are not all solemn, but even the playful ones imperfectly dissemble a note of deploring. For our part, we were not especially shocked; we do not particularly feel that the hand-to-hand (or more strictly, hand-to-cheek) encounter was unworthy of the two principals involved, and we cannot see why anyone should talk as if it were.

It was a lapse of charity and taste, no doubt, for Mr. Lewis, rightly or wrongly, to accuse Mr. Dreiser at a public dinner of plagiarizing Mrs. Lewis' book; it was equally a lapse for Mr. Dreiser to retort with a slap. But when did we begin to associate these two virtues with these two men? Charity is surely not the central characteristic of the author of "Babbitt" and "Gantry" (not to mention that oration on the American Philistine delivered not so very long ago in Stockholm). As to getting excited about Mr. Dreiser's lapses of taste at this date, we should have thought that beyond anyone's power.

We have heard a good many private comments on the incident, and they are all quite free from this sentiment of regret. Indeed, the general pleasure over the fact that Mr. Dreiser punched Mr. Lewis' head is impaired, we should say, only by a soupcon of dissatisfaction that Mr. Lewis was restrained before he could punch Mr. Dreiser's.

Years Mean Nothing

HARD work and a hopeful heart, says Capt. Robert Dollar, at 87, are a man's happiness.

"Years mean nothing; it's ambition that keeps the heart young. Get married early, stick to your job, and you will get ahead."

Hard work and a hopeful heart, continues the Chicago Tribune. At 90 Justice Holmes gave a decision the other day in the supreme court. At 84 President Hindenburg holds Germany on a hard course between dangerous extremes. At 83 Edison is active in new research and experiment. At 89 George Herbert Palmer is still a great and beautiful figure in American literature and education. At 86 Elihu Root is found as usual at his office at 31 Nassau street. At 92 Rockefeller makes his daily round of golf. At 79 Frank J. Loesch is a Chicago fighter against corruption. Prof. Michelson is 79, as active in science as ever. At 81 President Masaryk handles his country with a skillful hand. Youth is a point of view, it would seem, that has less and less to do with years.

The times are young, at least in many ways, but aged men perhaps never have had a more important place.

President Hoover and Summer Vacation

PRESIDENT HOOVER has made no definite plans for his summer vacation, it was said at the White House in reply to reports a summer White House was being planned for him in the Jackson Hole country south of Yellowstone Park in Wyoming.

Mr. Hoover has not authorized establishment of any quarters there and has made no decision regarding the invitation he received to spend his summer in Wyoming.

The President still hopes to carry out his long deferred plan to visit the National Parks enroute to his home in Palo Alto, Calif., sometime during the summer.

This also seems to definitely set at rest the idea that he was to spend his summer vacation in the Park Rapids country of the northern Minnesota lake region, or the many other places in Minnesota and other northern states that have tendered him invitations.

To Aid Cuyuna Range

A PROCESS being perfected at the University of Minnesota will make the steel industry of the United States independent of other countries for its supply of manganese, in the opinion of T. L. Joseph, metallurgist and superintendent of the north central station of the United States Bureau of Mines.

Work on the last step in perfecting a process for the recovery of manganese from low grade ore in Minnesota will be started in May or June. Such a process would give new impetus to iron mining on the Cuyuna range and make possible the development of new deposits, Joseph said.

During the World War the Cuyuna iron range was the base and foundation of the manganese resources of the United States. This little range in Crow Wing county proved the sole,dependable source of supply.

Uniformity in Traffic Regulations

UNIFORMITY in regulations of traffic is much to be desired. Many serious accidents occur because of confusion among drivers over regulatory requirements in different states and localities. Cities and counties vary in speed limits, in signals and in other regulations.

The driver, on a long journey, passing from one locality or county or state to another, oftentimes is bewildered and at a loss to know what is required in the different communities.

Upper Mississippi Improvements

CONSTRUCTION activity is apparent on the upper Mississippi river. Work is underway on the second lock at the Twin City high dam.

Additional men are being given employment along the river on other river improvement projects. By next week work will be started on digging a turning basin at the Minneapolis terminal. Work will be started soon in dredging the upper limits of the Hastings dam pool to insure a nine foot channel there.

A THEATER to seat more than 400 will be opened at the military post at Fort Meade, S. D. Members of the post will be trained in the operation of the equipment.

Other People's Opinions

Communications are not to exceed 300 words. All must be signed, and will be published with name of writer.

To the Editor of
The Brainerd Daily Dispatch:

It would seem by reading your articles that the Board of Education were united in a demand for what you term a Junior high school, but I for one would not like to have the impression stand that way. I have reason to believe that there are some of the other board members who desire that the voters be advised that the board is by no means unanimous in the proposition. For various reasons, we don't all agree that what you term a Junior high school building will solve our problem. It is conceded that we could vacate two rooms in our Lincoln school, the Harrison and Lowell. When we move the higher grades to another building, as we did a year ago, the lower grades can then move up in the vacated rooms. This will still leave us with no spare room in any of these buildings and it is to be expected that within a year the board will of necessity have to come to the people with the news that there is again children in the basement rooms, and they will have to have another sum of money from the tax payers to correct this condition. Do not forget that when the Washington high school was built with the Junior high rooms incorporated that you were promised that we would have school facilities for several years and all the children could be taken from the basements. A year has passed and we still have children in the basements.

My opinion which is agreed with by other board members is that the facilities in the old buildings can be corrected at a considerable less cost and give us room where room is needed. The present plan will give us two Junior high schools, as there will be Junior high pupils in both buildings. The statement has been made that no one has proposed a better site than the fill site to be voted on. I assert that the powers that be have decreed that it is the fill site or no site at all, and that has been the attitude since I have been on the board.

The proposal that the people will vote on in Tuesday's election is not the unanimous opinion of the Board by any means.

It will not be possible to operate another large school building without raising more money by taxation meaning an increase in taxes, which are high enough at the present time.

Signed,
FRED DREXLER.

WHAT ARE THE TRENDS IN RADIO SET DESIGN?

What will be the trend in radio receiver construction during the coming season? It is rather dangerous to make definite predictions of this sort, but present trends would seem to make the following developments rather certain:

First, I believe that small radio receivers will continue to increase in popularity. The trends in cabinet designs will be toward compactness and simplicity. Large, elaborate cabinets will continue to be offered for those who desire them, but the public demand will be centered on the smaller, simpler units.

The screen grid tubes will universally replace all other types in the radio frequency amplifier of all receivers. Improved loud speakers will be offered, and the tone quality of receivers will be, on the whole, better than that of the receivers of last year.

The superheterodyne type of receiver will prove extremely popular in the large cities and congested districts. Superheterodynes will be offered in midget receivers as well as in the larger models. With the increased use of superheterodynes in the cities the need for aerials will be dispensed with and many wires now strung about the house tops will disappear from the landscape.

It is also certain that radio receivers for automobiles will continue to increase in popularity. Many automobile manufacturers will offer radios as standard equipment in their cars. A distinctly new development along this line will be the introduction of radio receivers in passenger airplanes for the entertainment of travelers.

The United States will continue to be the largest producer of radio equipment, and radio exports to foreign countries will increase as in the past.

It Was No Pat on the Back

WHEN two distinguished literary lights came in collision in New York recently, Dreiser gave Lewis no pat on the back but a slap in the face.

The Commonweal comments that perhaps we should be ashamed to confess it, but we cannot emulate the pained surprise with which most of our editorial colleagues refer to the recent fracas of the two at the Metropolitan club in New York. Their utterances are not all solemn, but even the playful ones imperfectly dissemble a note of deploring. For our part, we were not especially shocked; we do not particularly feel that the hand-to-hand (or more strictly, hand-to-cheek) encounter was unworthy of the two principals involved, and we cannot see why anyone should talk as if it were.

It was a lapse of charity and taste, no doubt, for Mr. Lewis, rightly or wrongly, to accuse Mr. Dreiser at a public dinner of plagiarizing Mrs. Lewis' book; it was equally a lapse for Mr. Dreiser to retort with a slap. But when did we begin to associate these two virtues with these two men? Charity is surely not the central characteristic of the author of "Babbitt" and "Gantry" (not to mention that oration on the American Philistine delivered not so very long ago in Stockholm). As to getting excited about Mr. Dreiser's lapses of taste at this date, we should have thought that beyond anyone's power.

We have heard a good many private comments on the incident, and they are all quite free from this sentiment of regret. Indeed, the general pleasure over the fact that Mr. Dreiser punched Mr. Lewis' head is impaired, we should say, only by a soupcon of dissatisfaction that Mr. Lewis was restrained before he could punch Mr. Dreiser's.

Years Mean Nothing

HARD work and a hopeful heart, says Capt. Robert Dollar, at 87, are a man's happiness.

"Years mean nothing; it's ambition that keeps the heart young. Get married early, stick to your job, and you will get ahead."

Hard work and a hopeful heart, continues the Chicago Tribune. At 90 Justice Holmes gave a decision the other day in the supreme court. At 84 President Hindenburg holds Germany on a hard course between dangerous extremes. At 83 Edison is active in new research and experiment. At 89 George Herbert Palmer is still a great and beautiful figure in American literature and education. At 86 Elihu Root is found as usual at his office at 31 Nassau street. At 92 Rockefeller makes his daily round of golf. At 79 Frank J. Loesch is a Chicago fighter against corruption. Prof. Michelson is 79, as active in science as ever. At 81 President Masaryk handles his country with a skillful hand. Youth is a point of view, it would seem, that has less and less to do with years.

The times are young, at least in many ways, but aged men perhaps never have had a more important place.

President Hoover and Summer Vacation

PRESIDENT HOOVER has made no definite plans for his summer vacation, it was said at the White House in reply to reports a summer White House was being planned for him in the Jackson Hole country south of Yellowstone Park in Wyoming.

Mr. Hoover has not authorized establishment of any quarters there and has made no decision regarding the invitation he received to spend his summer in Wyoming.

The President still hopes to carry out his long deferred plan to visit the National Parks enroute to his home in Palo Alto, Calif., sometime during the summer.

This also seems to definitely set at rest the idea that he was to spend his summer vacation in the Park Rapids country of the northern Minnesota lake region, or the many other places in Minnesota and other northern states that have tendered him invitations.

To Aid Cuyuna Range

A PROCESS being perfected at the University of Minnesota will make the steel industry of the United States independent of other countries for its supply of manganese, in the opinion of T. L. Joseph, metallurgist and superintendent of the north central station of the United States Bureau of Mines.

Work on the last step in perfecting a process for the recovery of manganese from low grade ore in Minnesota will be started in May or June. Such a process would give new impetus to iron mining on the Cuyuna range and make possible the development of new deposits, Joseph said.

During the World War the Cuyuna iron range was the base and foundation of the manganese resources of the United States. This little range in Crow Wing county proved the sole,dependable source of supply.

Uniformity in Traffic Regulations

UNIFORMITY in regulations of traffic is much to be desired.

Many serious accidents occur because of confusion among drivers over regulatory requirements in different states and localities. Cities and counties vary in speed limits, in signals and in other regulations.

The driver, on a long journey, passing from one locality or county or state to another, oftentimes is bewildered and at a loss to know what is required in the different communities.

Upper Mississippi Improvements

CONSTRUCTION activity is apparent on the upper Mississippi river. Work is underway on the second lock at the Twin City high dam.

Additional men are being given employment along the river on other river improvement projects. By next week work will be started on digging a turning basin at the Minneapolis terminal. Work will be started soon in dredging the upper limits of the Hastings dam pool to insure a nine foot channel there.

A THEATER to seat more than 400 will be opened at the military post at Fort Meade, S. D. Members of the post will be trained in the operation of the equipment.

Other People's Opinions

Communications are not to exceed 300 words. All must be signed, and will be published with name of writer.

To the Editor of
The Brainerd Daily Dispatch:

It would seem by reading your articles that the Board of Education were united in a demand for what you term a Junior high school, but I for one would not like to have the impression stand that way. I have reason to believe that there are some of the other board members who desire that the voters be advised that the board is by no means unanimous in the proposition. For various reasons, we don't all agree that what you term a Junior high school building will solve our problem. It is conceded that we could vacate two rooms in our Lincoln school, the Harrison and Lowell. When we move the higher grades to another building, as we did a year ago, the lower grades can then move up in the vacated rooms. This will still leave us with no spare room in any of these buildings and it is to be expected that within a year the board will of necessity have to come to the people with the news that there is again children in the basement rooms, and they will have to have another sum of money from the tax payers to correct this condition. Do not forget that when the Washington high school was built with the Junior high rooms incorporated that you were promised that we would have school facilities for several years and all the children could be taken from the basements. A year has passed and we still have children in the basements.

My opinion which is agreed with by other board members is that the facilities in the old buildings can be corrected at a considerable less cost and give us room where room is needed. The present plan will give us two Junior high schools, as there will be Junior high pupils in both buildings. The statement has been made that no one has proposed a better site than the fill site to be voted on. I assert that the powers that be have decreed that it is the fill site or no site at all, and that has been the attitude since I have been on the board.

The proposal that the people will vote on in Tuesday's election is not the unanimous opinion of the Board by any means.

It will not be possible to operate another large school building without raising more money by taxation meaning an increase in taxes, which are high enough at the present time.

Signed,
FRED DREXLER.

WHAT ARE THE TRENDS IN RADIO SET DESIGN?

What will be the trend in radio receiver construction during the coming season? It is rather dangerous to make definite predictions of this sort, but present trends would seem to make the following developments rather certain:

First, I believe that small radio receivers will continue to increase in popularity. The trends in cabinet designs will be toward compactness and simplicity. Large, elaborate cabinets will continue to be offered for those who desire them, but the public demand will be centered on the smaller, simpler units.

The screen grid tubes will universally replace all other types in the radio frequency amplifier of all receivers. Improved loud speakers will be offered, and the tone quality of receivers will be, on the whole, better than that of the receivers of last year.

The superhetercdyne type of receiver will prove extremely popular in the large cities and congested districts. Superheterodynes will be offered in midget receivers as well as in the larger models. With the increased use of superheterodynes in the cities the need for aerials will be dispensed with and many wires now strung about the house tops will disappear from the landscape.

It is also certain that radio receivers for automobiles will continue to increase in popularity. Many automobile manufacturers will offer radios as standard equipment in their cars. A distinctly new development along this line will be the introduction of radio receivers in passenger airplanes for the entertainment of travelers.

The United States will continue to be the largest producer of radio equipment, and radio exports to foreign countries will increase as in the past.

HEAVYWEIGHT BOXING SITUATION IS MERRY-GO-ROUND

MAX SCHMELING, YOUNG STRIBLING BOUT AT CLEVELAND

PARADOXICALLY HEAVYWEIGHT CLASS HAS AT LEAST HALF DOZEN CONTENDERS

DIFFICULT TO MAKE GREAT FINANCIAL SUCCESS IN THE OUTDOOR SEASON

By DIXON STEWART
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, April 4. — The heavyweight boxing situation remained a merry-go-round today, with the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling championship bout now tentatively scheduled at Cleveland, July 3, and rival New York and Chicago promoters seeking the services of other titular aspirants.

Paradoxically the heavyweight class has at least half a dozen contenders who could be conceded an even chance against Champion Max Schmeling, but promoters are having great difficulty in arranging attractive bouts for the outdoor season.

With the outdoor season only two months away, not a single big bout is scheduled definitely and promoters are uncertain that they will be able to obtain even one attraction which would prove an outstanding financial success.

The Schmeling-Stribling bout has been driven from pillar to post, and with the New York Milk Fund, original sponsors, withdrawn from participation the championship contest remains in the uncertain class. It probably will be staged by Madison Square Garden Corporation of Illinois, and in Cleveland, but it does not appear likely to be a financial success.

Other heavyweights available for the outdoor season include Jack Sharkey, Tommy Loughran, Primo Carnera, Vittorio Campolo, and Mickey Walker. Unfortunately, all of the contenders, with the possible exception of Loughran and Walker, demand that they be allowed to "hand pick" their opponents and it is impossible to arrange an elimination series which would provide a single survivor to meet the Schmeling-Stribling winner in September to settle definitely the question of heavyweight superiority.

Schmeling never has been accepted as a worthy champion, and the winner of the Cleveland bout must prove his right to the title before winning popular recognition. Jack Sharkey might easily force his claims to a championship bout by eliminating other claimants, but Jack prefers to sit back and wait for the title chance to be handed him on a silver platter. Next to Sharkey, Tommy Loughran appears to have the best claim to a titular battle. Tommy is willing to box any rival contender, especially Sharkey, but is having difficulty in securing bouts.

The New York Milk Fund is anxious to stage its annual feature boxing show and reputedly is dickering for a Sharkey-Mickey Walker match. Madison Square Garden hopes to promote a Loughran-Campolo bout, with the winner meeting Sharkey, while Jimmy Johnston, Brooklyn promoter, claims to have Sharkey under contract for a match with either Loughran or Carnera.

LES CANADIENS WIN OPENER STANLEY CUP PLAY

MONTREAL TEAM DEFEATS CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS 2-1

DEFENDING CHAMPIONS TAKING A WELL EARNED REST TODAY

AFTER SUNDAY NIGHT'S GAME AT CHICAGO, REMAINING GAMES AT MONTREAL

Chicago, April 4.—(U.P.)—Pete Lepine and his team mates on Les Canadiens of Montreal, defending champions, took a well earned rest today after winning a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks in the opener in a best three-out-of-five series for possession of the Stanley Cup, emblematic of world's championship in professional ice hockey.

After Sunday night's game here, the remaining games of the series will be played in Montreal.

Lepine scored only one of the Flying Frenchmen's tallies, but his perfect checking of Blackhawk rushes into Montreal territory and his spectacular dashes in solo efforts to score, overshadowed the speed and perfect co-operation fo his team mates.

Neither of the teams displayed the brand of championship hockey that carried them into the finals. Mediocre playing was alternated with dazzling displays of speed, skill and strategy by both teams.

Canadiens went into the lead at 4:50 in the first period when Georges Mantha sagged the net behind Gardiner on Gagnon's pass. Their lead was increased early in the third period when Lepine eluded the Chicago defense on a solo effort and beat Gardiner.

A belated four-man offense by the local six resulted in Ripley scoring at 8:30 in the final period. The play was concentrated in Montreal territory the last 15 minutes of the game, but Chicago's strenuous efforts to tie the score were checked.

BROOKLYN ROBINS BACKED BY O'DOUL, FRESCO THOMPSON

MUST BE RECKONED AS A SERIOUS THREAT IN 1931 CAMPAIGN

This is the twelfth of a series dealing with 1931 prospects of the various major league baseball clubs.

By HENRY McLEMORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, April 4. — Strengthened by the acquisition of Lefty O'Doul and Fresco Thompson the Brooklyn Robins, who finished fourth in the National League last season, must be reckoned as a serious threat in the 1931 campaign.

The Robins' main strength lies in their hitting. Given decent pitching, this power at the plate may enable them to club their way past the Cardinals, Cubs, Giants and Pirates, the four teams rated as their rivals for the flag.

In O'Doul, Herman and Frederick, the Robins have a trio of outfielders expected to outhit any other set of flychasers in the league. The infield, composed of Bissonnette on first, Thompson at second, Wright at short, and Gilbert at third, also packs a heavy batting punch.

Since the leading hitters on the team—O'Doul, Herman, Frederick and Bissonette—all are left-handed batters, rival managers undoubtedly will try and check them by using southpaw pitching whenever possible. This strategy may not work, however, for O'Doul never has been bothered by port-siders, and Frederick and Bissonette hit any and all sorts of chucking. Herman dislikes left-handers but fortunately for the Robins, there are few capable southpaws in the league.

With Thompson on second the Robins are assured of a reliable fielder and a fairly decent hitter. Last year it was necessary for Manager Robinson to make frequent and disturbing changes at second base.

The Robins' pitching staff is one of quality and quantity. Dazzy Vance, Phelps, Luque, Gallivan, Quinn and Thurston will be the right-handed regulars, while Clark, Shaute and Heimach will form the southpaw brigade. Vance, late to sign, may not be able to start regularly in the early games of the season but when he rounds into shape should be as effective as last year when he topped all big league pitchers in the important matter of earned runs allowed.

The catching department is top-notch. Al Lopez, fiery little Cuban, will handle most of the work with Ernie Lombardi, Pacific Coast giant, as his understudy.

The team is expected to open the championship season with the following batting order:

Fredrick, cf; Gilbert, 3b; Herman, rf; O'Doul, lf; Wright, ss; Bissonette, 1b; Thompson, 2b; Lopez, c.

Balance of Power?

By HARDIN BURNLEY

© 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

FOR several seasons, the so-called lively ball has given baseball's batters a decided edge on the pitchers, an ever-increasing avalanche of home runs and other forms of sluggery all but burying many of the game's finer points. While manufacturers and most of the magnates denied there was any "rabbit" in the balls that seemed to turn bats into cannons, the National League decided at its Winter meeting to deaden the 1931 ball to the extent of increasing the thickness of its horsehide covering (by ten one-thousandths of an inch!) and stitching the seams in ridges as in days of yore. The American League will not change the thickness of the cover, but it too will have ridge-stitched balls, which detail is supposed to benefit the pitcher by improving his grip and allowing him to put more twist on the sphere.

It is difficult for many critics to see how these changes will deaden the ball much, but many players think the ridges and thicker hide will help even "the balance of power."

Especially optimistic are such veterans as John Picus Quinn, who will start his twenty-ninth consecutive year as leaguer this year, and Wilcy Moore, now of the Braves; and even Howard Ehmke is hopeful that the new ball has bagged "the rabbit" enough so he can come back in 1931. Of course, such an ancient as Quinn will serve chiefly as a relief pitcher with the Brooklyn Robins. Ed Rommel, Eppa Jeptha Rixey and other mound veterans are also banking on those new seamed grips to improve their slants. Even "Dazzy" Vance, still a star, thinks the rough seams and hair-line thicker hide will give the pitchers a better break.

If most of those vets do fairly well, the new ball will be given much credit. However, this Sport Bug fears that most of those renowned but thoroughly aged soupbones could not be sufficiently rejuvenated, even though baseballs were deadened by soaking them in Ponce de Leon's Fountain of Youth.

"Brains Come High"

By HARDIN BURNLEY

© 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

BASEBALL exemplifies the ancient adage that "brains come high," especially when one notes the salaries paid the game's best-known managers. The "Big Four" in that field consists of John McGraw of the New York Giants; Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics; Rogers Hornsby of the Chicago Cubs, and Joe McCarthy of the N. Y. Yankees. The Giants' Napoleon gets $75,000; his former second base attraction costs the Cubs the rajah-like price of fifty grand per annum, and the Yanks' new manager must struggle through on at least $40,000 during 1931. The canny Connie of the Athletics gets as much as McGraw for score-card and other details of master-minding. In addition, Mack has a big share of the ownership of the profitable Athletics.

Now the magnates concerned do not pay such salaries merely for the manager's history or his handshaking finesse. Each of the above is a recognized master of baseball who, through both aptitude and experience, has demonstrated an extraordinary knowledge of that game and its players—past, present, and to come. Furthermore, they must produce winners or teams that come close to the top.

Mack is dean of all the diamond's master minds. He got $5,000 for managing Pittsburgh back in 1894. McGraw became boss of the Giants in 1903, for what was then the munificent annual salary of $10,000. Seven years later, Mack turned down a $25,000 a year offer from the Yankees, since he had been made a partner in Athletic ownership by the astute "Ben" Shibe.

Among the famed managers who get less than "The Big Four" are Walter Johnson of the Washington Senators, Wilbur Robinson of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and "Bucky" Harris of the Detroit Tigers. They are reputed to get $25,000 a year; while Roger Peckinpaugh of the Cleveland Indians, is said to have a $20,000 a year contract.

Managing a major league club so as to win games and pennants requires generalship of high order. And so it is only just that brains (or what passes for such) come high in our national game.

While manufacturers and most of the magnates denied there was any "rabbit" in the balls that seemed to turn batsinto cannons, the National League decided at its Winter meeting to deaden the 1931 ball to the extent of increasing the thickness of its horsehide covering (by ten one-thousandths of an inch!) and stitching the seams in ridges as in days of yore. The American League will not change the thickness of the cover, but it too will have ridge-stitched balls, which detail is supposed to benefit the pitcher by improving his grip and allowing him to put more twist on the sphere.

It is difficult for many critics to see how these changes will deaden the ball much, but many players think the ridges and thicker hide will help even "the balance of power."

Especially optimistic are such veterans as John Picus Quinn, who will start his twenty-ninth consecutive year as leaguer this year, and Wilcy Moore, now of the Braves; and even Howard Ehmke is hopeful that the new ball has bagged "the rabbit" enough so he can come back in 1931. Of course, such an ancient as Quinn will serve chiefly as a relief pitcher with the Brooklyn Robins. Ed Rommel, Eppa Jeptha Rixey and other mound veterans are also banking on those new seamed grips to improve their slants. Even "Dazzy" Vance, still a star, thinks the rough seams and hair-line thicker hide will give the pitchers a better break.

If most of those vets do fairly well, the new ball will be given much credit. However, this Sport Bug fears that most of those renowned but thoroughly aged soupbones could not be sufficiently rejuvenated, even though baseballs were deadened by soaking them in Ponce de Leon's Fountain of Youth.

"Brains Come High"

By HARDIN BURNLEY

© 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

BASEBALL exemplifies the ancient adage that "brains come high," especially when one notes the salaries paid the game's best-known managers. The "Big Four" in that field consists of John McGraw of the New York Giants; Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics; Rogers Hornsby of the Chicago Cubs, and Joe McCarthy of the N. Y. Yankees. The Giants' Napoleon gets $75,000; his former second base attraction costs the Cubs the rajah-like price of fifty grand per annum, and the Yanks' new manager must struggle through on at least $40,000 during 1931. The canny Connie of the Athletics gets as much as McGraw for score-card and other details of master-minding. In addition, Mack has a big share of the ownership of the profitable Athletics.

Now the magnates concerned do not pay such salaries merely for the manager's history or his hand-shaking finesse. Each of the above is a recognized master of baseball who, through both aptitude and experience, has demonstrated an extraordinary knowledge of that game and its players—past, present, and to come. Furthermore, they must produce winners or teams that come close to the top.

Mack is dean of all the diamond's master minds. He got $5,000 for managing Pittsburgh back in 1894. McGraw became boss of the Giants in 1903, for what was then the munificent annual salary of $10,000. Seven years later, Mack turned down a $25,000 a year offer from the Yankees, since he had been made a partner in Athletic ownership by the astute "Ben" Shibe.

Among the famed managers who get less than "The Big Four" are Walter Johnson of the Washington Senators, Wilbur Robinson of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and "Bucky" Harris of the Detroit Tigers. They are reputed to get $25,000 a year; while Roger Peckinpaugh of the Cleveland Indians, is said to have a $20,000 a year contract.

Managing a major league club so as to win games and pennants requires generalship of high order. And so it is only just that brains (or what passes for such) come high in our national game.

'The Road to Yesterday' is Class Play of Seniors at High School April 10

The world is incurably romantic. Everyone, at sometime, wishes he lived in an age less humdrum than his own, when glamour and romance held sway, when men were men and ladies were cherished as are the lovely damsels in historical novels. All men like to picture themselves as the swashbuckling heroes of old, who dashed in on gallopnig steed with drawn sword to rescue beauty in distress; all women like to see themselves as the lady languishing in the tower shouting words of enocuragement to the knight below.

This is the theme of the play given by the senior class of the high school on April 10. Pretty Elspeth Tyrrell visits London and yearns for the days when men wore doublet and hose and ladies trailed silken gowns along the marble floors. Her wishes are fulfilled and she finds herself in the world of three hundred years ago, is delighted and sad and shocked by turns, and utterly incredulous that things were thus in the misty past.

The play has a most definite plot, is colorful and beautifully costumed, and moves with dispatch toward the final unveiling of the plot. Elspeth meets with lords and ladies of high degree, with yeomen wandering the roads, with kind and cruel people. She meets Reformado Jack and doubts that he is the hero; Lord Strangevon in velvet and purple intrigues her fancy until she learns that she is in his power; Lady Eleanor Tylney pleads for her deliverance ,and all the people in the tavern become involved in the story.

The play is clever—sparkles with wit and humor, with wise cracks and sarcasm. There is delightful characterization by Goody Phelps, the tavern keeper; by Tomkins the terrified tapster; by Malena the Gipsy, by Goody Gillaw, the witch, and by Hubert and Gile and Matt and Wat, the servants of the bold Lord Strangevon. Will the Feather, Dolly Foolis and Sir John the vicar, all add to the general effect of the play. All these parts are taken by members of the class many of whom have appeared in dramatic performances in other years. Every effort is being made to have the play a success.

Interesting Collection

A collection of old plantation diaries, journals and records and Confederate banknotes, dating from 1840 to 1900 is in the Louisiana State university library, the gift of the DeClouet family of LaFayette, La.

CONSTRUCTION WORK WILL TAKE UP SLACK

If Voted in, Junior High School Will be Built by Local Labor

EVERYBODY TO BENEFIT

Conclusive Theories Have Been Advanced Showing Advantages to Brainerd

(By Board of Education)

With the strong endorsement of the new building project by the various Parent Teacher organizations of Brainerd, and by our city papers who reflect public sentiment, it would seem that the new building proposal should go over strong next Tuesday.

If such is the case it should help, in no small way, to solve the non-employment problem in this city, after the months of depression and short pay envelopes.

It is expected that so far as possible, Brainerd labor will be given the preference on the work in the building project.

This should react to the benefit of our merchants as well as laborers, as merchants cannot sell goods unless patrons have the wherewithal to buy.

It has been shown very clearly that the new junior high school is needed.

It has been pointed out that the school district is in excellent shape financially to handle the project.

It has been demonstrated that it can be done without increasing the taxes.

It has been shown that it will improve our school system by making possible to put in operation the junior high school plan of upper grade organization.

Let us hope that the voters will do their part and give it a splendid endorsement at the polls.

H. Slocum and family arrived from Duluth today to make their future home here. Mr. Slocum has accepted a position in the Northern Pacific blacksmith shop.

The offices of the auditor of the M. & I. have been rearranged, Mr. Downie taking the room formerly occupied by Mr. Cleaves as chief clerk for a private office.

The house of Peter Gelow on his farm south of town was destroyed by fire at a loss of about $1,000. He carried $600 insurance.

The fire company was called out just before noon by a fire at the residence of Henry Linnemann. The blaze caught from a chimney and considerable damage was done to the room.

About 75 members of the North Star enjoyed a banquet and pleasant session last evening. A number of candidates were initiated.

Several rewards have been offered at Wahpeton, N. D., for the recovery of the body of Rev. Edmands of that city, formerly pastor of the First Congregational church here. He disappeared December 21 last, and it is believed was drowned through an air-hole in the ice. His hat and coat were found on the ice near an opening, and it is thought he was drowned. Diligent search was made at the time without success

MAPLE SYRUP TIME ON IN FULL SWING

Harvest to be Bountiful; Scenes of Activity Seen Near Mille Lacs Lake

The sap flows freely from the maples at the picturesque "sugar bush" adjoining the Indian Trading Post on Mille Lacs Lake and the scene there is an interesting one with Indians gathering the sap and taking it to the large kettle at the Post for evaporation.

Such activity in maple syrup time will continue for the next two weeks.

The season is outstanding and the production should be greater than formerly. Six thousand pails hang from the maple trees in the Post tract. Two trucks are used to rush the sap to the evaporator. The fire blazes far into the night because the sap continues to flow to fill the pails to the brim. The syrup is bottled and canned.

T. H. Croswell, Brainerd and H. D. Ayer of the Post are interested in the production. They have 12 people employed.

In freezing, ice is taken off the pail and discarded as in this event the sap is precipitated to the bottom of the pail and only the water freezes.

"FOREST 'E" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XLV.

AUNT Ellie's fat face flushed. "Please get me a glass of water," she asked Louise weakly, and the look that she gave her frightened niece was perhaps the only entirely unselfish one of her life. For once she was not concerned with her own symptoms. She felt dizzy and she didn't want to faint. She wanted to keep her consciousness until she could get rid of this loon the poor girl thought she was going to marry.

Instantly Mat was all contrition. "Oh, I'm so sorry!" he cried quickly. "I wouldn't have had this happen for anything, Lou, will you ever forgive me?"

"Of course. It's nothing... Aunt Ellie, please don't mind. Mat was just fooling. He didn't mean—"

Too Good To Be True.

"But I wasn't fooling!"

"Young man, you mean to say, you're trying to tell me—"

"Mat, you ARE joking!"

All the bravado was gone. He looked shy and nervous, as he used to look. He tugged at a dark lock of his hair, pushing it back nervously. "But I'm not joking!" he reiterated miserably. "It's true. I should have told Louise. I got sick of everybody pointing me out back home as the Tully boy . . . you know. I thought I might amount to something if they'd let me work in peace, and I'm getting there... Lou, darling, didn't I tell you my paper is going to be published? In the next issue I think. Blaxwell said—"

With a superhuman effort Aunt Ellie pulled herself together. "Just a minute," she commanded. "Did I understand you to say TWO million? That's a lot of money, young man!" She wagged her finger solemnly.

He looked more ashamed than ever. "I know. Mother was Cornelia Rinderneck. Dad is Homer E. Tully—you know Tully Tractors—I mean you'd know if you were interested in tractors. Oh, the money part is all right. You can wire dad if it would make you feel any better."

"Oh, no!" Louise gasped. "Oh Aunt Ellie wouldn't THINK of it."

But Aunt Ellie did, and was highly gratified with her answer. She talked a solid forty minutes over the telephone to Kitty Hollenbeck, who became mildly insane with excitement, and kept poor papa awake all night, gloating.

There was no wedding. Mama wept over that, but she consoled herself planning the story she would send to the morning papers. Son of Homer E. Tully, grandson of Philip Rhinderneck . . . take that, Cora Craig, boasting about marrying your freckled May Belle to that little shrimp of a Gilbert Neal, Jr!

Old Mr. Knox read the wedding service in the little Piedmont chapel where the girls had been christened and confirmed.

Mat's voice trembled, but Lou's was clear and strong.

They came back to the house afterward, Louise in her new Spring suit with Mat's orchids pinned on the coat, Mat in his usual shapeless tweeds.

At first there seemed so much time, and suddenly the taxi to take them to the train was outside, and Mat, his arm encircling Lou's waist in that new, possessive manner as if she belonged to him instead of

Her room was full of odds and ends. Nancy began to pick them up.

to the family, was leading her to the door. "Come on, Lou, we'll have to step on it! Goodbye, everybody—I'll take good care of her—Goodbye! Goodbye!"

One last kiss for mama, Louise's firm, fragrant cheek pressed close to the yellowed, wrinkled one. A big hug for grandma. "Take care of yourself, pa darling!" One last embrace for Nancy—

"Got to hurry, Lou!"

They were gone.

Reaction.

Papa got his hat, wheeled himself onto the veranda, where he sat, very quiet, puffing at his pipe. Mama sagged in her armchair, complained that her feet were cold, cried quietly into her handkerchief, rousing herself at intervals to ask:

"Nancy! Did you put that jasmine soap I had from Christmas in Lou's bag? . . . I hope that white georgette nightgown washes all right. I wish you'd bought crepe de chine, that DOES wash . . . Though she won't have to care. I wish you'd bought that duchess lace set I saw in Madame Fair's . . . Nan-cy! Did you get that good picture for the papers? Bring me that silver dish the Alexanders sent. There! I knew it . . . well, who'd think of looking for a sterling mark THERE!"

Grandma Hollenbeck found herself crying into the dishpan. When Nancy came in to help she pointed mutely at the rice, a whole new bag of it on the kitchen table.

"After I got it, specially!"

They laughed at that, shakily, nervously, forgetting to stop.

But finally there wasn't anything left to laugh about or talk about. Everything had been reviewed and discussed from the Rindernecks' millions to the color of Mat's tie. They began to realize that Louise was gone, that she would never really belong to them again.

Her room was full of odds and ends, too old to take. The blue bathrobe for the Salvation Army. The stockings with darns and runs for Grandma's hooked rugs. Boxes and tissue paper.

Nancy began to pick them up.

She tried to whistle, to hum, to keep her mind on Lou. But it wouldn't stay there. It kept skipping back to another day . . . just think . . . nearly a year! Nearly a year since her wedding day . . . so different from Lou's. "If I had it to do over again," she mused, talking half to herself. But you don't have things to do over again. Just once . . .

She oughtn't to do it. She had promised herself that she wouldn't. But you ought to be allowed to be a little sentimental on your sister's wedding day.

She got out Roger's pictures, and the plain little wedding ring that she had worn such a short, short time. She slipped it on, studied it thoughtfully. A pretty design. Some kind of leaf. Roger would have known what it was. Funny she had never thought to ask him. She studied the pictures. The one of him in front of the cabin was the best. It showed that twinkle in his eyes, that indescribable sparkle that other men didn't have. The one with the broad brimmed hat on hid his face, but you felt his strength, sensed the beautiful rippling muscles under the khaki shirt... Damn it! There she was crying again. "You weak sister, you! You big idiot! Are you going to go on falling for twinkly eyes and ripply muscles all your life... or are you going to marry a regular man that can take care of you and drag you out of this awful slump?"

The Breaking Point.

Nancy answered the rhetorical question. She poked pictures and ring hastily into the handkerchief box, powdered her nose and ran downstairs.

"Grandma!"

Grandmother Hollenbeck was discovered talking over the back fence, probably describing Louise's romance to the Whaley's cook.

Papa snored in the wheel chair. Mama slept fitfully on the davenport near the window.

The once cheerful living room seemed seedy and close.

She COULDN'T go on like this. She couldn't stand it! She'd go crazy!

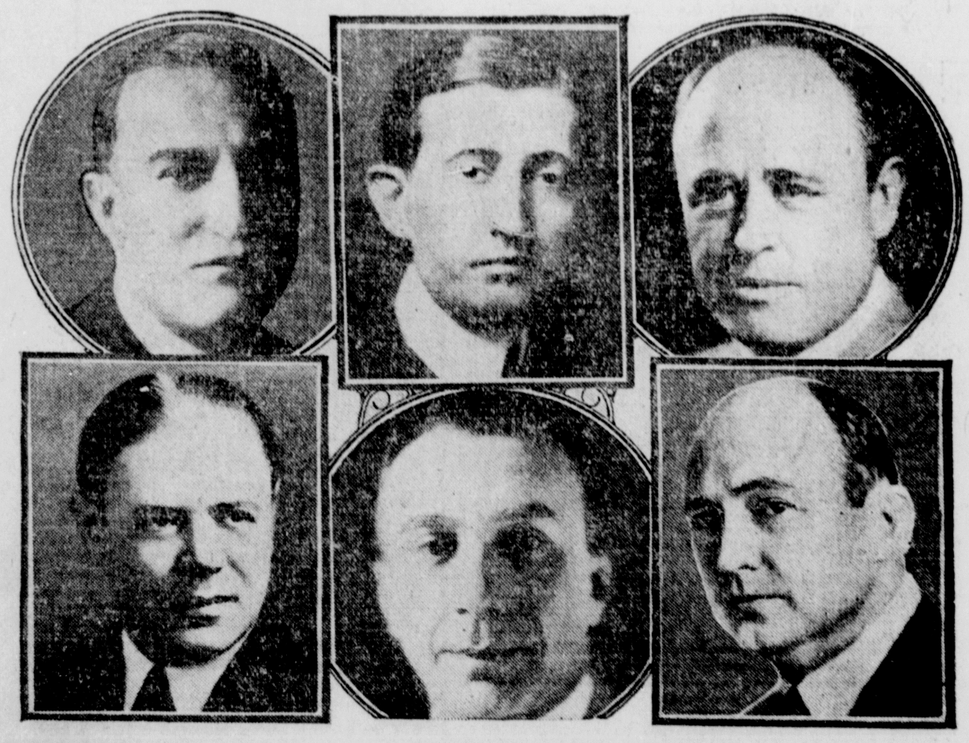

In a voice that shook a little she called Jack Beamer's offices.

He wasn't there.

After a moment's indecision she called the Jackson Street house.

About Ourselves

Since we are all approaching the time when we are sure to be called either "a dear old soul" or "a horrid old thing," let us fly our joy signals now, so there may be no doubt of our future cognomen.

Ancient Powder Horns

The larger end of the old powder horn was closed with a disk of wood, to which a loop was attached for the shoulder strap or cord. The tip of the horn was bored through and a wooden stopper closed the opening.

Birds Traveled de Luxe

Too exhausted to continue their overseas flight, a linnet and a chaffinch alighted on a liner on its way from New York to Liverpool and remained on the vessel until it reached port.

"FOREST E" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XLV.

AUNT Ellie's fat face flushed. "Please get me a glass of water," she asked Louise weakly, and the look that she gave her frightened niece was perhaps the only entirely unselfish one of her life. For once she was not concerned with her own symptoms. She felt dizzy and she didn't want to faint. She wanted to keep her consciousness until she could get rid of this loon the poor girl thought she was going to marry.

Instantly Mat was all contrition. "Oh, I'm so sorry!" he cried quickly. "I wouldn't have had this happen for anything. Lou, will you ever forgive me?"

"Of course. It's nothing... Aunt Ellie, please don't mind. Mat was just fooling. He didn't mean—"

Her room was full of odds and ends. Nancy began to pick them up.

Too Good To Be True.

"But I wasn't fooling!"

"Young man, you mean to say, you're trying to tell me—"

"Mat, you ARE joking!"

All the bravado was gone. He looked shy and nervous, as he used to look. He tugged at a dark lock of his hair, pushing it back nervously. "But I'm not joking!" he reiterated miserably. "It's true. I should have told Louise. I got sick of everybody pointing me out back home as the Tully boy . . . you know. I thought I might amount to something if they'd let me work in peace, and I'm getting there... Lou, darling, didn't I tell you my paper is going to be published? In the next issue I think. Blaxwell said—"

With a superhuman effort Aunt Ellie pulled herself together. "Just a minute," she commanded. "Did I understand you to say TWO million? That's a lot of money, young man!" She wagged her finger solemnly.

He looked more ashamed than ever. "I know. Mother was Cornelia Rinderneck. Dad is Homer E. Tully—you know Tully Tractors—I mean you'd know if you were interested in tractors. Oh, the money part is all right. You can wire dad if it would make you feel any better."

"Oh, no!" Louise gasped. "Oh Aunt Ellie wouldn't THINK of it."

But Aunt Ellie did, and was highly gratified with her answer. She talked a solid forty minutes over the telephone to Kitty Hollenbeck, who became mildly insane with excitement, and kept poor papa awake all night, gloating.

There was no wedding. Mama wept over that, but she consoled herself planning the story she would send to the morning papers. Son of Homer E. Tully, grandson of Philip Rhinderneck . . . take that, Cora Craig, boasting about marrying your freckled May Belle to that little shrimp of a Gilbert Neal, Jr!

Old Mr. Knox read the wedding service in the little Piedmont chapel where the girls had been christened and confirmed.

Mat's voice trembled, but Lou's was clear and strong.

They came back to the house afterward, Louise in her new Spring suit with Mat's orchids pinned on the coat, Mat in his usual shapeless tweeds.

At first there seemed so much time, and suddenly the taxi to take them to the train was outside, and Mat, his arm encircling Lou's waist in that new, possessive manner as if she belonged to him instead of to the family, was leading her to the door. "Come on, Lou, we'll have to step on it! Goodbye, everybody—I'll take good care of her—Goodbye! Goodbye!"

One last kiss for mama, Louise's firm, fragrant cheek pressed close to the yellowed, wrinkled one. A big hug for grandma. "Take care of yourself, pa darling!" One last embrace for Nancy—

"Got to hurry, Lou!"

They were gone.

Reaction.

Papa got his hat, wheeled himself onto the veranda, where he sat, very quiet, puffing at his pipe. Mama sagged in her armchair, complained that her feet were cold, cried quietly into her handkerchief, rousing herself at intervals to ask:

"Nancy! Did you put that jasmine soap I had from Christmas in Lou's bag? . . . I hope that white georgette nightgown washes all right. I wish you'd bought crepe de chine, that DOES wash . . . Though she won't have to care. I wish you'd bought that duchess lace set I saw in Madame Fair's . . . Nan-cy! Did you get that good picture for the papers? Bring me that silver dish the Alexanders sent. There! I knew it . . . well, who'd think of looking for a sterling mark THERE!"

Grandma Hollenbeck found herself crying into the dishpan. When Nancy came in to help she pointed mutely at the rice, a whole new bag of it on the kitchen table.

"After I got it, specially!"

They laughed at that, shakily, nervously, forgetting to stop.

But finally there wasn't anything left to laugh about or talk about. Everything had been reviewed and discussed from the Rindernecks' millions to the color of Mat's tie. They began to realize that Louise was gone, that she would never really belong to them again.

Her room was full of odds and ends, too old to take. The blue bathrobe for the Salvation Army. The stockings with darns and runs for Grandma's hooked rugs. Boxes and tissue paper.

Nancy began to pick them up.

She tried to whistle, to hum, to keep her mind on Lou. But it wouldn't stay there. It kept skipping back to another day . . . just think . . . nearly a year! Nearly a year since her wedding day . . . so different from Lou's. "If I had it to do over again," she mused, talking half to herself. But you don't have things to do over again. Just once . . .

She oughtn't to do it. She had promised herself that she wouldn't. But you ought to be allowed to be a little sentimental on your sister's wedding day.

She got out Roger's pictures, and the plain little wedding ring that she had worn such a short, short time. She slipped it on, studied it thoughtfully. A pretty design. Some kind of leaf. Roger would have known what it was. Funny she had never thought to ask him. She studied the pictures. The one of him in front of the cabin was the best. It showed that twinkle in his eyes, that indescribable sparkle that other men didn't have. The one with the broad brimmed hat on hid his face, but you felt his strength, sensed the beautiful rippling muscles under the khaki shirt... Damn it! There she was crying again. "You weak sister, you! You big idiot! Are you going to go on falling for twinkly eyes and ripply muscles all your life... or are you going to marry a regular man that can take care of you and drag you out of this awful slump?"

The Breaking Point.

Nancy answered the rhetorical question. She poked pictures and ring hastily into the handkerchief box, powdered her nose and ran downstairs.

"Grandma!"

Grandmother Hollenbeck was discovered talking over the back fence, probably describing Louise's romance to the Whaley's cook.

Papa snored in the wheel chair. Mama slept fitfully on the davenport near the window.

The once cheerful living room seemed seedy and close.

She COULDN'T go on like this. She couldn't stand it! She'd go crazy!

In a voice that shook a little she called Jack Beamer's offices.

He wasn't there.

After a moment's indecision she called the Jackson Street house.

About Ourselves

Since we are all approaching the time when we are sure to be called either "a dear old soul" or "a horrid old thing," let us fly our joy signals now, so there may be no doubt of our future cognomen.

Ancient Powder Horns

The larger end of the old powder horn was closed with a disk of wood, to which a loop was attached for the shoulder strap or cord. The tip of the horn was bored through and a wooden stopper closed the opening.

Birds Traveled de Luxe

Too exhausted to continue their overseas flight, a linnet and a chaffinch alighted on a liner on its way from New York to Liverpool and remained on the vessel until it reached port.

SOUTHWEST MILDRED

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Emerch drove down from Boy River Friday. They will spend their vacation at Mildred and Motley.

Mrs. T. J. McCabe left Thursday via car for western South Dakota where they will locate. Her nephew, Sivert Siverson of Crookston drove for her.

Mr. McCabe left Wednesday with the immigrant car of live stock and household goods.

Miss Margaret McCabe spent the week end with the Lesher family at Mildred store.

Frank Caswell left Friday afternoon for Little Falls for a load of flour for the creamery. On the return trip his truck experienced no less than three blowouts. The latter stranded him four miles out of Brainerd where he remained, with his son Merton, until Arthur Degnan who was also along walked back to Brainerd to obtain assistance. The latter however didn't arrive until early Saturday morning. Mr. Caswell and Mertin will undoubtedly remember for quite a while—that certain trip.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Lesher and daughters, Susan and Lora Jane, called at the Bill Evans home Sunday afternoon.

The school board met Friday and hired their teachers for the coming year. The same teachers were engaged for another term.
